Can the spiritual significance of music be quantified? Can it be categorized like any other mundane and earthly commodity? I think not. Music is the audible expression of the frequencies that bind us together. Music is in the very air that we breathe, it is the rustle of leaves in a gentle breeze, and it is the roar of waves on a rocky shore. It is the soft kiss of a mother's lullaby, the triumphant march of graduation, and the mournful expression of grief. It is the call to war, and the plea for mercy. It is that which transcends culture, boundaries, and religions. It is the words we cannot speak, and the comfort we cannot give. It is the embodiment of love and hope, and the expression of hate and fear. It is in everything, and of everything. We must only tune our ears, to hear.
