Music has a way of impressing your mind for good or bad like no other method of communication. A great song can hit you between the eyes, resurrect a memory or feeling and elevate your current mood. Music can come out of an idea or experience, sometimes as far as our childhood, and the music that comes out can be described as the brains' way of classifying, organizing, putting order to disorder, processing and packaging that experience in a way that is attractive or catchy. I feel the music that affects me the most is soulful, melancholy, and melodic music. I think it is what gives balance to my sometimes overly positive and charismatic mindset. Yes, music is a wonderfully crafted and inspired idea that dances closely with the human spiritual realm.
