In the depths of your deep question I have an answer. You used the word "spiritual" and I believe this is the answer. Music art is about emotions like sorrow, hate, and joy. No one can say "my sorrow is thus". So the music we create can show all the invisible emotions of the spirit. That spirit is not a ghost alive in the flesh, but rather the spirit is in the backside of the head. I believe music is a part of art. I believe in an un-decomposed art which is dark like reality and not truth. I don't want to be a great guitarist, drummer, or vocalist, rather I am trying to be a dark artist who creates a dark complete art. The music is just a part of a creation and I don't believe in its privacy. Music is not able to tell you what is in the depths of a mind. Music needs the other arts and only the dark side of art is true, because there is no light and whiteness in the universe of its existence. The music is part of my all, there are other parts in me that I need to discover, maybe another kind of art.
