

The Spiritual Significance Of Music

SIMON FISHER-TURNER

This is today's answer, with a thought or two to ponder. I believe everyone probably has their own different answer to the spiritual significance of music. Music is always spiritual. It's just life isn't it. It is the very fabric of my life, like breathing. Soundbones. For me, the most honest music is plainly spiritual if it is honestly written or performed. It's easier to say what music is not spiritual. When you hit a drum you summon a spirit. When you hit a man, you damage a soul. Music fills us and heals us. It is an emotive sensation. It's the eighth sensation. Homo-sapiens as a species will die, and their music will die with them, and the significance of music will die. So perhaps there is NO spiritual significance in music, BUT IN SOUND. Sound is the spirituality of the soul.

SIMON FISHER-TURNER

COMPOSER, MUSICIAN, AND SONGWRITER